

Everyone considered him the coward of the county.
Had never stood one single time to prove the county wrong.
His mama called him Tommy, the folks just called him Yellow,
But something always told me they were reading Tommy wrong.

He was only ten years old when his daddy died in prison.
I took care of Tommy cause he was my brother's son.
I still recall the final words my brother said to Tommy:
Son, my life is over, but yours is just begun.

CHORUS

*Promise me, son, not to do the things I've done.
Walk away from trouble if you can.
It don't mean you're weak if you turn the other cheek.
I hope you're old enough to understand:
Son, you don't have to fight to be a man.*

There's someone for everyone and Tommy's love was Becky.
In her arms he didn't have to prove he was a man.
One day while he was working the gambling boys came calling.
They took turns at Becky.... there was three of them!

Tommy opened up the door and saw his Becky crying.
The torn dress, the shattered look was more than he could stand.
He reached above the fireplace and took down his daddy's picture.
As his tears fell on his daddy's face, I heard these words again:

CHORUS

The gambling boys just laughed at him when he walked into the bar room.
One of them got up and met him halfway across the floor.
When Tommy turned around they said, hey look! old Yellow's leaving.
But you could've heard a pin drop when Tommy stopped and blocked the door.

Twenty years of crawling was bottled up inside him.
He wasn't holding nothing back; he let them have it all.
When Tommy left the bar room not a gambling boy was standing.
He said, this one's for Becky, as he watched the last one fall.
And I heard him say,

*I promised you, dad, not to do the things you done.
I walk away from trouble when I can.
Now please don't think I'm weak, I didn't turn the other cheek,
And papa, I sure hope you understand:
Sometimes you gotta fight when you're a man.*

Everyone considered him the coward of the county.
